

AUSTRALIA'S WINE STATES

SOUTH AUSTRALIA

Straddling the centre of the Australian continent, South Australia is the wine industry's powerhouse state, producing most of the nation's wine and boasting many of Australia's iconic 'Big Reds'. The Barossa Valley and McLaren Vale are home to some of the oldest individual vines in the world.

NEW SOUTH WALES

Lying on the continent's east coast, this is was the first state to be colonised by Europeans and subsequently some of Australia's very first grapevines were planted here. It has an incredibly diverse range of climates and is home to one of Australia's best known wine zones - the Hunter Valley.

TASMANIA

The wineries of Tasmania are gaining an excellent reputation for the production of premium quality wines. The island state has a much cooler climate than other wine regions, creating excellent conditions for the production of cooler climate varietals such as Sauvignon Blanc and Pinot Noir in regions like the Tamar Valley.

VICTORIA

Victoria boasts a diverse range of climates throughout its winemaking regions, from the changeable Mornington Peninsula to the cooler Yarra Valley and Alpine Valley Regions. This allows the state to produce a great range of varietals of exceptional quality.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA

Western Australia is Australia's largest state, however wine production is almost entirely concentrated to the South Western portion in regions such as Margaret River. Over the last two decades this states entrepreneurs have driven the development of estates and wineries to overcome Western Australia's geographic isolation to carve their mark both in Australia and around the world.
